

The only available Brazilian national soybean index in the world
SAFRAS & CTDI Brazilian Soybean Index on MarketDesk

Accurate unified soybean index pricing across Brazil to the globe

In 2020, Brazil officially became the number one producer of soybeans in the world, replacing the United States. Brazil also doubles as the largest exporter of soybeans to China, the world's largest importer by a large margin.

Last June, MarketDesk, SAFRAS & Mercado and CTD Indices launched the first of its kind international soybean index, a unique MarketDesk technical business solutions initiative.

The index is an effective tool that offers users aggregated soybean prices from 37 different cities across Brazil. It fills a void, as there was no set single soybean price at the national level inside the sprawling Latin American nation. All Brazilian soybean prices were independently set within cities across the country where physical trading takes place in regional markets. This is limiting as Brazil is the world's leading soybean producer and exporter.

A lack of a transparent coherent national soybean price is a significant gap for servicing the global financial industry making the SAFRAS CTDI Brazilian Soybean index benchmark an invaluable price tool for producers, midstream grain merchants and financial participants for production and hedging purposes.

The SAFRAS & Mercado CTDI Brazilian Soybean Index adheres to the IOSCO Statement of Compliance for reliable and transparent integrity.

MarketDesk's proprietary cloud-based market distribution technology hosts the SAFRAS & Mercado CTDI Index allowing traders a transparent, efficient and accurate tool to compare end-of-day soybean pricing across Brazil.
